TALL, BLOND AND HANDSOME

"HE'S simply terrific, Lana," Betty Hamilton said between breaths as she ran up to her girl-friend on the campus. "Simply wow!"

"Huh?" Lana's forehead wrinkled up in confusion. "Who's what?"

"I saw him in the hall this afternoon, between Math and Latin classes," Betty rambled on without even hearing what Lana had asked. "He's tall, blond and . . . and . . ." Betty searched her limited vocabulary for a special adjective, but couldn't find it, so she settled for, "gorgeous."

"Betty Hamilton, what on earth are you talking about?" Lana demanded, and she stopped walking to stare at her girl-friend. But Betty seemed oblivious to all earthly things. She was a million miles away . . . well, at least half way up the block, before she heard Lana's voice calling to her. She turned and saw Lana standing on the sidewalk, her arms akimbo, and her books scattered on the sidewalk.

"Lana, why are you standing there?" Betty asked innocently. "Aren't you coming home?" She ran to where Lana was and helped her pick up the books. "You should be more careful, Lana, you can ruin your books dropping them that way on the walk."

"I didn't drop them, Betty," Lana said, with her teeth clenched tight. "I threw them down."

"You threw them down?" Betty repeated the words, then added, "why?"

"Because you irk me at times, Miss Hamilton. You swoop down upon me out of nowhere, jibbering like a parrot, and when I ask you what you're talking about, you ignore me completely."

"I did that, Lana? When?"

"Today . . . yesterday . . . the day before . . . last year . . . always." Lana kept track of the times on her fingers as she spoke to Betty. "Now, before we move another step, please tell me what all that double-talk was about: 'He's tall . . . he's blond . . . he's gorgeous . . . he's terrific . . .'"

"Gee, he sounds wonderful. Who is he, Lana?"

"I DON'T KNOW! I'VE NEVER SEEN HIM!" Lana screamed.

"Then how do you know he's blond and that . . ."

"Wait a minute, Betty . . . wait just one minute, please," Lana held up her hand like a traffic policeman when he wants to halt a car. "Let's start right from the beginning. My name is Lana Green and . . ."

"Pleased to meet you, Lana," Betty extended her hand. "My name's Betty Hamilton and . . ."

"OH FOR SILLY'S SAKE, BETTY, STOP THAT!" Lana dropped her books again as she screamed.

Betty gathered them up and handed them to Lana without saying a word. She could see that Lana was in no mood for comment on the preservation of school books. Without another word they started to walk again. Lana looked straight ahead, her lips were pressed tight together and her brown eyes were dancing with fire.

The deep silence continued as they crossed Elm Street, State Street and Lincoln Avenue. Then as they turned down Butterview Lane, where Lana lived, Betty said. "He's terrific, Lana. Simply wow!"

"Oh-oh, here we go again," Lana raised her books ready to throw them down on the pavement.

"No, don't, Lana. I remember what I was talking about back there. It's the new student. He just moved into town. His name is Randy Carr and he's the handsomest boy in school."

"Oh, Betty, you say that about every boy," Lana told her. "I'm not interested in Randy Carr."

"I may have been wrong about all the others . . . but this time I'm sure that my eyes didn't deceive me."

Lana and Betty reached the picket fence surrounding Lana's home and the two girls talked for a while and then parted, with Betty promising Lana that she would point out Randy Carr to her tomorrow.

The following afternoon Betty and Lana were stationed at the same exact spot where Betty had been standing the day before when she had seen Randy Carr walking down the hall.

"Well, where's your handsome Romeo, Betty?" Lana asked impatiently. "If we stay here any longer we'll be late for our next class. I'm beginning to think that you've been seeing . . ."

"Sh-h-h," Betty hushed Lana. "Look . . . over there," she motioned with her head toward class room number 4550. "There he is now."

Lana looked down the hall and saw a white sweater approaching. It had a big block-letter 'A' on it. Those were the first two things that Lana noticed. Then she looked up at the face of the young man coming toward them. Her lower jaw dropped and hung loosely as she stared at the sun-tanned figure. Her eyes combed his honey-colored hair and swam in the blue waters of his eyes. And just as she was warming in the glow of his friendly smile, she heard a voice asking: "Would you please direct me to the gym? I'm new here and don't know my way around very well."

Betty poked Lana in the ribs with her elbow and snapped her out of her day-dream. "I have to go to class," Betty said as she gave Lana a gentle kick in the shins as a signal. "But my girl-friend Lana is going toward the gym. I'm sure she'll be glad to show you where it is. Wouldn't you, Lana?" Betty delivered another gentle blow to Lana's leg.

"Betty, quit poking..." she stopped suddenly, realizing why Betty was jabbing her. "Oh, yes ... I'm going that way. 'Bye, Betty, see you later."

Lana and the new student knew quite a bit about each other by the time that they reached the gym. Lana took him past the place seven times, but Randy didn't seem to mind. They talked about the things they both liked and disliked, about sports, about studies... and of course the conversation got around to dates. Lana invited Randy to her home on Saturday to meet her mother and father. Lana always did that with her new dates. That way she got the approval or disapproval of a boy from her mother and father. They were busy talking about favorite records when the bell rang. Randy said goodbye and hurried off toward the gym.

Lana was all excited that evening as she helped her mother set the plates for dinner. "Oh, he's so different, mother. He's so... so mature, so manly... and very handsome. Oh, I do hope you and dad like him."

"If he's anything like you say he is, Lana, I'm sure we will," her mother assured her.

"He's new here and . . ." Lana's words were cut off by the soft chimes of the front door. "Oh, mother, that must be Randy now, I'll get it."

It was Randy, and he looked even more handsome and mature to Lana in his pin-striped suit. She introduced him, proudly, to her mother and father and then they sat down to dinner.

Lana could see that Randy was making a big hit with the folks and she was pleased. After dinner they all went into the living room and sat down. Lana's father asked a few questions of Randy and Lana could almost feel the third-degree coming on. She crossed her fingers and wished hard that Randy would pass the test.

Lana's mother called her into the kitchen to help with the dishes and Lana went reluctantly. She hated to leave Randy alone with her father. But her dad assured her that he and Randy would get along fine.

After the dishes got done the family and Randy sat around the television until almost eleven. Lana's father gave the long, hinting yawn and said something about it being time for all good people to be asleep.

Lana walked Randy to the door and they talked for a few minutes. She asked if she'd see him again, but Randy shook his head and said: "We better not, Lana. You're a wonderful girl ... but I can't see you again. I shouldn't have come tonight... and I wouldn't have if I had known that... that...," Randy faltered and opened the door. "Better let your father tell you, Lana. Good-night, and thanks for asking me to dinner and to meet your mother and dad. They're great." Randy walked out and closed the door.

Lana was puzzled and when she walked into the living room her father looked at her and smiled sympathetically. "Did he tell you, Lana?" her father asked.

"He told me that he wouldn't see me again," Lana said. "But he wouldn't explain. He said that you would tell me, Dad."

"Randy Carr is a married man, Lana," her father said softly.

"Randy... married?"

"Yes, he told me that he was a veteran. Fought in Korea," her father explained. "He's going to finish college here under the G.I. Bill of Rights. His wife is in California and is going to join him next month."

"But... but why did he..."

"He came here not as a date with you, Lana. He's a stranger and he wanted to meet some people, some families, like your mother, me and you. He didn't know you had a crush on him until I hinted at it."

Lana sat down on the hassock and sighed.

"He's a fine lad, Lana. And when his wife gets here we'll invite them over for dinner, okay?"

Lana looked up at her dad and smiled, her eyes sparkling with a mist of tears. "Okay, dad."

IT'S MY OWN FAULT! BY THIS TIME I SHOULD KNOW THAT I CAN'T TRUST YOU TO DO A SIMPLE THING FOR ME LIKE GIVING A MECHANIC MY LAWN MOWER!

"I bet some friends that I could learn piano quickly. They didn't believe me—because I am slow learning. Imagine their surprise when I played for them. One said, "Why it sounds like you've been playing for years!" — Louise Gomes, Oakland, Cal.

Now Famous Band Leader

"I got my start in music with a U. S. School Course. How easy it is to learn to read notes and play an instrument this 'learn yourself' way! I've enrolled my two daughters." — Lawrence Welk, top band leader.

In Many Cases, Doctors Advise Use of This Technique

Men notice your legs first! Heavy flabby legs can make a woman feel self-conscious, look older and heavier than she is. Beautifully firm, slenderized legs help the rest of your figure look slimmer, more appealing! Give yourself a chance to look good in the latest fashions of higher skirts, bathing suits, shorts, etc. Now at last, you too can try to help yourself, to improve heavy legs, due to normal causes, as many women have by following this new scientific method. You should try to do something about reducing and reshaping ANY PART of your legs you wish . . . such as streamlining bulging hips into more youthful lines . . . trimming down flabby thighs into a bewitching contour . . . acquiring feminine appeal in place of ugly knees . . . fat calves into more slenderized alluring curves . . . heavy ankles into more sleek graceful lines . . . or your legs all over!

Clothes Look Unattractive With Heavy Legs!

On fat flabby legs, hose haven't any appeal . . . all dresses, suits, skirts seem to fit clumsily . . . even expensive shoes look unstylish, ungraceful and poor fitting. Fat legs make your entire appearance look heavier, more matronly.

Clothes Look Glamorous With Shapely Legs!

Whether sitting or standing, shapely legs are the foundation of feminine loveliness. Sheer hose, all shoes, dresses, skirts, look and fit their best over well formed hips, thighs, knees, calves, ankles
